Mississippi Text Exemplars

The Mississippi Text Exemplars list is a compilation of text titles gathered from teachers and English Language Arts specialists from around the state of Mississippi.¹ Over 80 teachers and curriculum specialists were contacted and asked to identify texts that were used in grades K-6 classrooms in their districts. The sample texts were compiled into a list based on the response of Mississippi teachers. The list was then vetted by a task force of Mississippi English Language Arts teachers and specialists, including members of higher education communities in Mississippi. This task force vetted these texts based on the following criteria:

- Appropriate age and grade-level text complexity
- Appropriate age and grade-level content
- Value of literature and informational text to classroom instruction
- Recommendations of Mississippi English Language Arts teachers and specialists

This list is by no means exhaustive. It is not a required reading list for Mississippi students, nor is it a suggested reading list. The list serves as a sample list of texts that have been used within the state of Mississippi.

¹ Some texts may be used in multiple grade levels, depending on reader and task considerations.

Mississippi Text Exemplars

It is important to note the types of texts that the CCSS require at each grade level when choosing texts. For example, the CCSS for grade 3 requires students to read myths. While the Mississippi text exemplars may contain myths at various grade levels, it would be plausible to use the myths listed below, even if they have been placed at a different grade level. Furthermore, for the purposes of integrating curriculum, it is important to note the topics required by the Mississippi Social Studies and Science Frameworks at each grade level. For example, fourth grade students are required to study Mississippi's Native American groups; therefore, teachers may choose texts about these groups even if they are listed at another grade level. Finally, the PARCC Model Content Frameworks for each grade level can be utilized to provide teachers with further parameters when choosing texts and creating text sets to be used with the titles on the Mississippi exemplar list.
