Power of Identifying and Selecting Evidence-Based Practices for School Success

As school administrators delve further into research focused on utilizing comprehensive needs assessments to develop programs supported by Title I, they must also begin to think about school leadership and decision-making for identifying effective practices and the evidence base to support them. In these unprecedented times of teaching, leading, and learning due to COVID-19, it becomes more of a moral imperative to reflect, reimagine, and reconnect to those evidence-based practices proven to transform schools. Click here for a resource that can support school and district leadership teams as they work through this process. Members of these teams should consider utilizing this resource as they think through ways to allocate school improvement 1003 funds to support the cause for each school's identification.
