NEA Foundation Grant Winner

Therese M. Jilek, Glendale, WI

Instructional Technology Coordinator, North Shore Middle School
Through an action research project, Ms. Jilek investigates the effect of authentic and relevant experiences on student learning and the effect of interaction with children around the world on students' attitudes toward other cultures and each other. Students in Ms. Jilek's increasingly diverse class establish e-mail correspondence with students in other countries and participate in a global classroom project to exchange information and reexamine cultural stereotypes. Ms. Jilek shares the results of her study through district staff meetings and an online teacher exchange. (83 words)

Language used in successful FIPSE grant application in school district and university partnership

The purpose of this project was to develop, implement, and evaluate a model for providing district-wide teacher training in the use and integration of instructional technology to achieve curricular goals that are competency based and designed to be world class standards.

Barry University proposed a training-of-trainers model to conduct system-wide teacher training to help teachers utilize and integrate available state-of-the-art technology in the teaching of math, science, social studies, language arts and English as a second language. The seminal works by Joyce (1990) and Joyce and Showers on effective inservice education (1983, 1988) and Joyce, Showers, and Rolheiser-Bennett (1987) served to guide the development of the Infusion training model.

The key components of the Infusion model included:

- best practice in teacher training/professional development;
- levels of training: university, school based, and parent;
- competitive recruitment of teachers to be trained;
- intensive, graduate level training of project teachers;
- administrative involvement at all levels of project;
- mentoring and follow-up of trained teachers responsible for training personnel at their school sites.

This is NOT a dream...

Project: Obtaining a mobile lab cart of 36 tablets for two kindergarten classrooms for centers and full classroom learning. Consists of a cart, 36 tablets, case for each tablet, Google management licenses for each tablet, 36 headphones, and $1,000 voucher to purchase apps on Google Play for Education. This would be the initial step in placing tablets in all K-2 classrooms.

Keep this for your budget planning!

Build on new trends, ideas

Social Emotional Learning (SEL)

- SEL curriculum/embedded in other subjects
- CASEL.org has developed resources to integrate SEL with English Language Arts, Math, Social Studies, and general teaching approaches
- FUNecole – elementary computer coding/literacy with SEL embedded

Look at trends around you for ideas!

- Use technology creatively, purposefully and safely.

Gwyneth was named one of five National Cengage/Gale SLJ New Leaders, was the PBS-NTTI "Teacher of the Year" in 2001 and the 2004 MICCA "Outstanding Educator Using Technology" for Howard County. She speaks locally and nationally, and has presented at METC_CSD, AASL, NECC, MSET, CASL, MASL, online webinars for ISTE SIGMS, TL Virtual Cafe, and in the virtual world of Second Life. Leaving a career in advertising, public relations, and marketing nineteen years ago, to pursue a career in technology education she now uses effective design and communication skills gained through her experiences in the business world to communicate her love of research and information gathering, reading, and technology with her students, staff, and community. In her spare time, Gwyneth enjoys reading, traveling, digital photography, graphic design, alternative/progressive music, Welsh stuff, buzztime trivia, darts, exploring the Steampunk Aesthetic and managing a virtual library & factory in New Babbage - Second Life, and writing biographies of herself in the third person. Admittedly, she's a goofball and a geek.
